

Coronavirus update 1 July 2020

We are continuing to support our clients across the NHS and other sectors whilst doing everything we can to protect our employees and partners. As lockdown measures continue to decrease, we are taking steps to enable a safe, gradual return to the office from Monday 6th July.

A managed return

We have reworked our office space to adhere to social distancing measures. Our Consultants will continue to be available in our core hours, from 8.30am – 6pm Monday-Friday, whether they are working remotely or from the office.

We will be able to offer face to face interviews and meetings safely within our offices or at an outside location. Our priority at all times will remain the safety of colleagues and partners, and we will continue to carefully monitor government advice and act accordingly.

Contractor care

Anyone with symptoms should follow government advice with regard to self-isolation and inform their Keystream contact as soon as possible. All contractors have been made aware of good health and safety practices with regard to Covid-19.

There is no change to Keystream's contractor payment schedules, processes or terms. We are committed to ensuring the payment process is timely and smooth.

Advice and support

We are available to support clients, contractors and candidates across all markets, including the NHS.

During this period, we have transitioned teams from onsite to remote locations, provided advice about the government furlough scheme and offered general support to many of our contractor network who have been anxious about the current situation. into force in April.

Keystream remains available to support all clients, candidates and contractors in any way we can throughout these challenging times, and we wish everyone all the best.
